MAKING WOMEN MORE ACTIVE WITH A CHILD-FRIENDLY APPROACH

INTRODUCTION

Sofia, the Bulgarian capital, has exceptional geographic features such as the Vitosha Mountain, just on the outskirts of Sofia, and numerous green spaces (parks and forests). Being a city with a longstanding tradition of sports promotion, Sofia has succeeded in encouraging sports, knowing that the practice of sports is a healthy habit, as well as an integrating force for its citizens and an optimal way to occupy their free time. Over the years, we have materialized this commitment by building a network of modern sporting installations and spaces for public use, including spaces for the handicapped.

The Sports Movement and the ideals that guide it have been close to the heart of generations of women in Sofia and their preservation is one of the main tasks of the Sofia City Council. The aim of Sofia2018 is to help strengthen the sports spirit of the young generation, making it more active in engaging in sports, building on national traditions and fostering a legacy to embrace the future.

In order to ensure women participation in sport and to enhance Sofia’s image as a city, which is inclusive, and gender neutral, Sofia European Capital of Sport took part to the SWUP, the EU-funded project aiming at increasing women’s practice of outdoor physical activities in urban spaces. Based on several studies and surveys, both local and international, a pilot program based on a child-friendly approach was designed to make women more active.

Making women more active with a Child-friendly approach includes actions, which aim at making it easier for women of Sofia to participate in various types of sporting events, which are part of Sofia European Capital of Sport program. The learning deriving from the implementation of pilot activities will be used to continue improve our strategies to encourage women’s participation in sport.

We are convinced that this initiative will transform and inspire the lives of women in Sofia, creating benefit for present generations and a modern heritage for generations to come.

WHY SOFIA NEEDS THIS PILOT PROGRAMME TO BE IMPLEMENTED?

During the project we implemented a survey in which we asked the women of Sofia who participated in our events information about the barriers and motivations to do outdoor sports. About 100 women were included in the sample and 50% of the respondents answered to the questionnaires fully.

According to the results of the SW-UP survey, the main reasons indicated by women for not being active on a weekly basis was the lack of time due to work or study (47%) and family obligations (42%), followed by the lack of company to do sports (23%). Being outside were most often mentioned, with both placing within the top five motivations.

Based on these results, we understood that the objective is to improve the quality and quantity of the participation of women in sports by providing suitable conditions for them to come and participate with their children. More specifically, we identified childcare and a variety of outdoor activities with a focus on health and relaxation, including activities for groups, both inside and outside working hours, as key activities to make women more active.

For this reason, our pilot program will focus on the offer of childcare service in 10 out of 100 events of the capital, thus hoping to encourage women in taking part to the events and be more physically active.

In our program, we highlight the beauty of the Vitosha Mountain and three city parks as places for playing sports and being active. We created the slogan “CITY IN THE MOUNTAIN, MOUNTAIN IN THE CITY” which emphasizes how suitable our city is for doing outdoor sports.

The slopes of the Vitosha Mountain are conveniently situated only 17 km away from the center of Sofia. The mountain is a National Park and a space for leisure activities, sports and tourism. It is precisely in the Vitosha Mountain that we offered events with childcare service for those mothers participating to the event.

ABOUT THE PILOT PROGRAMME

What is this Pilot Programme about?

The pilot program aims at encouraging more women to engage in outdoor activities by providing a free-of-charge child-care service led by students. In this way, women will be able to bring their children with them and it will be easier for them to take part to the sport events and consequently increasing the amount of outdoor physical activity.
The people in charge of taking care of the children will be the students of National Sports Academy. Sofia 2018 signed an official contract with the Academy so that we can officially offer internships to the sports students in the 5th and 6th semesters. This document will allow students to apply for an internship with Sofia2018 and participate as volunteers in our events, in activities such as organizing a children’s playground or being instructors in the events. This practice will be recognized for their curriculum. This will ensure that children using the childcare service will be assisted by qualified students in physical education and sports, who will place tents and organize sporting activities for the kids in the timeframe of the event.

During the events with childcare service, we place a banner indicating, where the tent for childcare is. We placed a Tent where mothers can leave the kids belongings filling the form with the personal information of the mother and the child (name, telephone for emergency, age, the power of attorney on the child during the time of the event). Once the children are sent to their assigned area, the students will entertain them with games and physical activities according to their age.

In order to improve the tool and offer additional services in the future, in three from our ten events we will ask participating mothers for an assessment of the service and for their further needs.

The child-friendly approach

This initiative aims at making women’s life easier and giving women a forum to support each other by doing sport together, exchanging views regarding child development and care and finding new friends.

“Child-friendly care” includes the notion of “family-friendly”, facilitating the interaction between kids and their mothers, facilitating contacts between the child and his or her mother.

After taking part in our events, the mothers are excited and tired. In the meantime, their kids being entertained become excited and tired too and most important – willing to come and play again.
Therefore, this reaction becomes a strong impulse for the mothers to participate.

The following conditions must be met in order to achieve higher participation of women.

The most important benefit resulting from the adoption of the child-friendly approach is to bring harmony and synergy between all the stakeholders – sports organizations or professional groups, including children and mothers themselves and to draw attention on the understanding of needs as a strategy to improve and expand the services for woman with children in the future.

Principles

Following principles is particularly relevant to the child-friendly approach:

a. Participation

The level of women participation in our Program depends on our efforts to provide a child-friendly approach so that women can bring their children with them. The level of child participation depends also on their age. The younger the children, the harder it is for the mother to find time and a suitable childcare to participate in sports.

b. Promotion

Sports promotion is “the process of enabling people to increase their level of participation”. It includes all actions that allow women and their children to become more involved in sports.

Target Group

Women with children between the ages of 2 and 10.
Action plan

In more than 90 events organizing under the initiative Sofia European Capital of Sports, we try to encourage woman participation providing suitable conditions (mobile changing rooms and toilets) for their involvement and at ten events child-friendly approach. In all those activities, the pilot program seeks to mobilize women of all ages, focusing on those with children, which can broaden the scope of involvement of women.

As a result of women participation to these activities, we expect to:

1. Increase the participation of women in outdoors physical activity;
2. Promote awareness among women regarding the physical activities they can practice outdoors;
3. Challenging women to be more physically active outdoors with friends and partners.
